THE REPORT OF DIVISION ADMINISTRATOR SOL A. ROSENBLATT TO THE ADMINISTRATOR FOR INDUSTRIAL RECOVERY, PURSUANT TO ORDERS DATED DECEMBER 6, 1933, AND MARCH 3, 1934, RESPECTIVELY, REGARDING THE INVESTIGATION DIRECTED TO BE MADE BY THE PRESIDENT IN HIS EXECUTIVE ORDER OF NOVEMBER 27, 1933, APPROVING THE CODE OF FAIR COMPETITION FOR THE MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY

Gen. HUGH S. JOHNSON,
Administrator for Industrial Recovery,
Washington, D.C.

SIR: I have the honor to report to you as follows:

PRELIMINARY

The Code of Fair Competition for the Motion Picture Industry as proposed and submitted on August 23, 1933, contained, among others, provisions designed:

(a) To control payment of excessive salaries for services of executives and certain other employees in the motion picture industry; and

(b) To eliminate alleged unfair competitive methods utilized by one producer in securing the services of various classes of employees under contract with another producer.

These provisions are contained in suspended article V, division A, part 4, and suspended article V, division B, part 5, sections 1 (c), 2, 3, 4, and 6 of the code as finally approved by the President.

At the public hearings held in Washington on September 12, 13, and 14, 1933, respecting the Motion Picture Industry Code, and at the various conferences held subsequent to the public hearings, proponents for and against the proposals under present consideration were heard at length.

On October 26, 1933, in the capacity of Deputy Administrator, I reported as follows to the Administrator for Industrial Recovery relative to those code provisions dealing with excessive salaries and unfair competition for the services of certain classes of employees:

Excessive Salaries

"ARTICLE V—A. General.—Included in the statement of general unfair practices is a proposal under which the Code Authority is authorized to investigate whether any employer in the industry has offered an unreasonably excessive inducement to anyone to enter his employ. If so found, then with the approval of the Administrator, such employer may be assessed the amount of the unreasonably excessive inducement, up to the amount of $10,000. Nothing in the proposal, however, affects the validity of the agreement of employment so entered into between the offending employer and his employee. (Part 4.)

"The aim of the proposal is to check and correct certain alleged abuses of which wide-spread notice has heretofore been taken in investigations and legal proceedings.

"Your Deputy makes no recommendation with respect to continuing this provision in the proposed Code."

The Administrator, on this section, reported to the President:

"I recommend that such proposal shall not become effective and that the same shall be indefinitely suspended from operation pending further order from the President."

Unfair Competitive Practices Used in Securing Services of Certain Classes of Employees

I further reported to the Administrator as follows:

"There is another provision which is intended to effectuate the same purpose—the preservation to a producer of the relationship existing with his employees.

"Before discussing the specific proposals contained in the Code in such regard, your Deputy points out that when employees are regularly employed by a producer for a period of time, the relationship is customarily mutually beneficial. The producer in such case contends that his organization and his efforts result in building up the value of such employee. The employee, while usually recognizing the justice of the producer's contention, on the other hand contends that were it not for the innate abilities of such employee, the producer would not be able to realize value from the employment. These contentions of both producers and their employees are not only made with respect to actors, but are also made with respect to all employees engaged in creative, artistic, technical, or executive capacities. (Employees whose labors are purely creative, such as writers, authors, and dramatists, contend that they are in a different position from other employees, and urge that any of the producers' contentions as aforesaid are not applicable to them.)

"To the end, therefore, that both producers and their employees shall receive, free from interference, full benefits and advantages arising out of the contractual relationship, the code provides that no offers shall be made by a producer to or for such employees of another producer until 30 days before the expiration of the then existing contractual relationship. The code further provides that as and when a firm bona fide offer has been made by the then employing producer to the employee involved, that during the last 30 days of the strictly contractual relationship such then employing producer shall receive notice of offers from the competing producer, so that the bidding for services shall take place in the open and the then employing producer shall have an opportunity to meet any offers made by a competing producer, and thereby, but only upon the free choice of the employee, be able possibly to continue in his own employment such employee. The employee's choice as between such offers made is entirely preserved. Such is the procedure provided for by the code up to the expiration of the contractual relationship. (Part 5.)

"Before continuing with the further provisions of the code upon this subject, it is pertinent to point out that the further provisions relate primarily to a theory of prior repute, that is, the theory of producers that those employees receiving very substantial compensation have been enabled to a large degree to secure for themselves such large compensation by reason of the efforts and facilities of their producer employers, and that by reason of such fact the producer employers have an ethical and moral right to be made acquainted for a stipulated period of time after the expiration of the contractual period of employment with offers made for the services of such former employees by competing producers, in order that the last employing producer may be able to meet such offers or at least negotiate with such former employee for a continuance of the employment with the last employing producer; and if such negotiations are successful, thereby preserving to the last employing producer an asset of undoubtedly great value.

"These further provisions, relating to a time after the contractual relationship has ended, are presently opposed by organizations of the employees affected, upon the ground that such provisions will tend to decrease bidding for services and thereby directly tend to limit the compensation which such employees might expect to receive, if such provisions for open bidding were not embraced within this code. Your Deputy offers no opinion with respect to this theory of prior repute, advanced by producers, nor with respect to the arguments adduced by employees opposing such provisions, except to say that the provisions in the code relating to such subject matter are not, in his opinion, such as to work a hardship on either producers or such employees, and that the treatment of such proposals is entirely from the standpoint of fair practice on the part of producers, with entire freedom of choice left to the employees with respect to their acceptance or rejection of offers.

"Briefly, the proposals immediately above referred to are that when the last employing producer has made a bona fide firm offer for the services of such employee who has received compensation of from $500 per week to $1,000 per week, or of from $5,000 per picture to $10,000 per picture, the last employing producer shall have notice of offers made by competing producers for a period of three months following the expiration of the employment; and in cases where the compensation of such employees was more than $1,000 per week or more than $10,000 per picture, the period during which such last employing producer shall be entitled to receive notice shall be six months following the expiration date of the contractual relationship previously existing. (Part 5, section 4.)

"Provision is made with respect to the determination of the good faith of offers made so as to entitle producers to notice of subsequent offers, and procedure is also devised whereby after notice has been given to the last employing producer he shall have the very shortest reasonable time within which to negotiate to meet an offer made by a competing producer, together with adequate safeguards for the exercise by the former employee of his free choice in acceptance or rejection of offers. (Part 5, section 6.)

"One further provision with respect to the contractual relationship existing between producers and such above described employees is deserving of special comment. Such provision declares that if the Code Authority, or any committee appointed by it for that purpose, after notice and hearing, shall find that any employee of any producer has refused without just cause to render services under any contract of employment, the Code Authority shall have full power, with the approval of the Administrator, to order all producers to refrain from employing any such person for such period of time as may be designated by the Code Authority, and making it an unfair trade practice for any producer to employ such person in violation of such order, or for any distributor or exhibitor, respectively, to distribute or exhibit any picture produced during the period prescribed by the Code Authority by or with the aid of such person. The interests of all parties concerned have been safeguarded with respect to the application of such provision of the code. (Part 5, section 7.)

"The foregoing provision is especially designed to meet instances where, without just cause, an employee under contract has declined to render his services, thereby in effect wasting the assets of the employing producer and otherwise jeopardizing or impairing his business, with resultant loss not only to the employing producer but also to his other employees and to all those interested in his business. The provision, while drastic, is supportable upon the theory that if an industry has the right to make rules and regulations with respect to fair practices, it has the concurrent right to make rules and regulations in the nature of self-discipline within the industry for the mutual protection and benefit of all concerned by or under such rules and regulations.

"Your Deputy respectfully submits the provisions of article V, division B, part 5, for consideration. In your Deputy's opinion, these provisions require the most careful supervision, with thorough investigation and frequent reports demanded by the Administrator concerning their operation.

"On the general subject of abuses and payments of excessive compensation, your Deputy recommends thorough investigation with report made to the President respecting such subject.

"(Your Deputy begs to comment that a fair method of determining compensation, where it is likely to run into large figures, especially with respect to production activities, would be employment at a minimum stipulated figure against a percentage of the receipts of the production with which such person is associated.)"

The Administrator, on these provisions, reported to the President as follows:

"I recommend that such provisions shall in no event apply to writers, authors, and dramatists, and that with respect to other employees embraced within such provisions that such provisions shall not become effective and shall be suspended from operation pending further report from the Administrator after investigation."

On November 27, 1933, the President in his Executive order approving the Code of Fair Competition for the Motion Picture Industry made, among others, the following conditions of approval:

"(4) Because the President believes that further investigation with respect to the problems of payment of excessive compensation to executives and other employees in this industry is required, the provisions of article V, division A, part 4, of this code are hereby suspended from operation and shall not become effective pending further report from the Administrator after investigation; and

"(5) Because the President believes that writers, authors, and dramatists are engaged in purely creative work, the provisions of article V, division B, part 5, sections 1 (c), 2, 3, 4, and 6, of this code, shall not become effective with respect to such employees; and

"(6) Because the President believes that further investigation is required with respect to problems generally affecting unfair competitive methods for the services of classes of employees of producers rendering services of an artistic, interpretative, technical, supervisory, or executive nature, the provisions of article V, division B, part 5, sections 1 (c), 2, 3, 4, and 6, of this code, are suspended from operation and shall not become effective pending further report from the Administrator, after investigation, as to whether such provisions should be indefinitely suspended, or modified, altered, or changed, or become effective."

By the Administrator's order of December 6, 1933, he directed as follows:

"Deputy Administrator Sol A. Rosenblatt is hereby designated as representative of the Administration upon the Code Authority of the Motion Picture Industry Code.

"In connection with his duties thereon he is hereby directed to make investigation and report to the Administrator pursuant to the provisions of sections 4 and 6 of the Executive order signed by the President on November 27, 1933; such report to be made to the Administrator not later than 90 days from the effective date of the code."

Thereafter, and by order of March 3, 1934, the Administrator directed that this report be made on or before July 7, 1934.

INVESTIGATION MADE

(a) Following December 6, 1933, I had innumerable conferences with representative groups in the production division of the industry regarding the subject matter of investigation.

On January 20, 1934, I journeyed to California for more facts and enlightenment on the subject matter, as I believed that such material upon which proper conclusions could be based might be more properly secured by direct contact with the production executives and employees affected by the investigation employed in production, and their agents, at the center of motion picture production in California.

At all times I received the fullest cooperation from each group concerned. Conferences were held with representative production executives and with representative actors, directors, writers, technicians and supervisors. Thereupon, a divergence in views regarding the practicability, enforceability and wisdom of the suspended provisions of the code was disclosed.

(b) Respecting an investigation of salaries paid in the motion picture industry, I caused to be formulated the form of questionnaire and memoranda attached hereto (exhibit 1). Copies thereof in duplicate were disseminated on or about January 15, 1934, to approximately 2,000 persons, firms, and corporations engaged in the industry. Thereafter, on or about February 21, 1934, a letter (exhibit 2) was forwarded to those firms from whom replies had not been received; and thereafter, on or about April 12, 1934, a further communication (exhibit 3) was directed to those who had not yet to that time replied. Hereafter, the results of such statistical survey will be more fully expounded.

GENERAL PROBLEMS OF THE INDUSTRY

The years of depression were particularly trying ones for the motion picture industry. Dependent as it is for its financial prosperity upon mass patronage, the tremendous decline in mass purchasing power during the last few years made serious inroads on its theatre revenues. Moreover, tremendous capital investment had been made in studio and theatre equipment as a result of the new era in motion picture entertainment introduced by sound and talking pictures. Faced with the problem of decreased patronage and with the added problems of tremendous fixed charges, the industry was forced both to reduce theatre admission prices and to attempt to improve the quality of entertainment in the effort to attract more people into the theatres.

To accomplish this, the producer invited the public with glamorous and more glamorous screen personalities. Producers discovered that the creation of such personalities was a costly process and, moreover, that once created, they were always open to the predatory raids of competing producers. Thus, in the scramble to attract the public, salaries of executives and screen stars were raised to abnormal heights. Stars were given contracts at figures substantially above recently prevailing rates, and far in excess on an average of salaries generally commanded by the outstanding personalities of the silent screen. By this action producers were flying in the face of sound judgment. Business management in every line of commercial activity was drastically reducing operating expenses, including salaries. The combined operation of these trends made it difficult, if not impossible, to adjust production costs to the new era of generally depressed earnings. A series of equity and other receiverships in the industry, affecting the investment of hundreds of thousands of stockholders, was the result.

Of the 5 largest companies in the field, 1 is in bankruptcy; 1 is operating in receivership and bankruptcy; 1 undertook capital reorganization to meet an indebtedness of $42,000,000; 1 showed a loss of more than $16,000,000 for the year 1932; and the earnings of 1 were reduced from a net income of $15,000,000 in 1931 to a net income of $7,000,000 in 1932.

Moreover, on the basis of the highest quotations to date, the public's equity in the common stock of these five major companies has been reduced from a high of $960,000,000 in 1930 to approximately $140,000,000 at the present time.

Among the factors contributing to the distressed financial condition of the motion picture industry were: (a) a greatly reduced mass audience for screen entertainment by reason of wide-spread unemployment; (b) great operating losses, due to undoubted over-investment in large-type theatres; (c) cutthroat competition for the services of outstanding screen personalities, resulting in (d) excessive salary ranges, making it difficult to secure economical production.

Inflated capital structures require drastic corrective measures, which come by the operation of the laws of economics during depression periods with operating losses.

Increased activity of stockholders in the operations of their companies may result in an incentive to sounder and better management, and such activity has been and should be welcomed by able and competent management.

Enforced readjustments, particularly during the past 12 months, have already had a salutary effect upon the financial structure of the exhibition division of the industry. The drastic procedure of receivership and bankruptcy has operated to deflate capital structures. Substantial economies have been imposed upon theatre operation.

But no convincing evidence exists to indicate that basic production costs have been greatly reduced, or that any substantial progress has been made toward the elimination of those practices prevalent within the industry which tend to depress the quality of motion picture entertainment offered to the consuming public.

Rationalization of production costs remains the essence of the problems in the financial rehabilitation of the production division of the motion picture industry.

The seriousness of these problems was given full consideration throughout the negotiations leading up to the final approval of the Motion Picture Industry Code. In support of the inclusion of the suspended provisions in the code, its sponsors contended—

(1) That the payment of excessive salaries constitutes a major factor in the maintenance of high production costs, and that rationalization of production costs can best be accomplished by devices to control the payment of excessive salaries.

(2) That the provisions dealing with excessive salaries, and with unfair competitive practices utilized in securing the services of certain classes of employees, furnish an effective and practicable method of control.

SPECIFIC PRODUCTION PROBLEMS EMBRACED WITHIN THE SUSPENDED PROVISIONS OF THE CODE

The industry has made no material progress in setting the production side of its house in order. One general indication of the contribution which salary payments make to the maladjustment of production costs is found in the failure of management to adjust salary ranges of executives or artists to changed earning capacity of the various companies in the industry. The question therefore naturally arises: Why has the situation not been corrected by calculated action on the part of management, or by the operation of natural competitive forces?

The various answers to this question can be found only in a close analysis of the fundamental characteristics of the motion picture industry and of the trade practices which have emerged from these rather unique conditions.

The intangibles of human talent, not celluloid, constitute the basic ingredient of the entertainment service offered to the consuming public by the motion picture industry. Here, as in no other artistic field, the talents of unique personalities have, through the organization and sales ingenuity of the industry, been brought before vast audiences in every part of the world. The public following established by a director or star is the dominating element of sales appeal possessed by the distributor in offering a complete entertainment schedule to the exhibitor. Public popularity of a unique personality is the principal token by which the exhibitor, in the first instance, and the public, in the second, are induced to purchase the entertainment products offered by the producer. The exhibitor in the industry is in rather a peculiar situation in planning his business schedules. He must assure himself of the complete entertainment service offered to the public. He therefore contracts for most of his pictures before the actual production of these pictures is completed, and must gauge the drawing power of the prospective entertainment offered him largely on the basis of the public following which past performance has established for the star, director, or producer.

To a limited degree the factors which control the value of artists and directors apply also to production executives. Exceptional ability to approximate public reaction to an offering, to single out new entertainment possibilities, and to combine artistic services in the production of successful entertainment features calls for unusual talent. The vision which leads a producer to pioneer in new fields of entertainment unquestionably springs from creative instinct. Then, too, the investment dependent upon the fickleness of public reaction is too great to speculate on unproved executive ability.

Thus, the mere fact that unusual creative talent, unique in some cases, constitutes the bone and marrow of the motion picture industry, offers a natural explanation for the comparatively high compensation which is offered by the industry for these services. As in every other line of endeavor, unusual ability or talent commands a higher price by virtue of its scarcity. At the same time, under the normal operation of economic forces, the compensation commanded by these talents is in the long run determined by the appeal which they make to the consuming public. An artist may have a talent of infinite and lasting value to offer to the world, but from a strictly commercial standpoint that talent is worth only as much as it can earn for the producer in box-office receipts.

The theory is simple. But in applying it to a determination of salary schedules for executives and various other employees in the motion picture industry, the existence of numerous imponderables reduces its application to little better than guess work.

In the first place, and as a matter of principle, no salary is too high or excessive if the picture produced by the individual receiving the salary meets with unusual public favor as a result of unique direction or artistry. Such a picture may continue to earn large sums after the charges for the services which produced it have been absorbed. On the other hand, the reverse may be true. Public popularity of artists is a flimsy and perishable product. It is dependent upon the vagaries of public favor. A screen personality may be a popular hero today and forgotten tomorrow. Moreover, it is difficult for executives to determine with even a reasonable degree of certainty the extent of the contribution made to a motion picture by the author, director, actor, scenic artist, photographer, publicity agent, or any one of a large number of other individuals who contribute to its creation and final presentation to the public.

These imponderables make it difficult but not inherently impossible for management to maintain a reasonable adjustment between income and outlay for salary payments to executives and artists. The difficulties encountered on this score are not limited to the motion picture industry; they are common in one degree or another in every commercial enterprise whose existence is dependent upon the whims of public favor.

Granting all of the legitimate reasons that make for comparatively high salaries, as well as giving full weight to the difficulties encountered by management in setting proper salary standards in the industry, the fact remains that all available evidence indicates that primary gross salary ranges in the motion picture industry have gone beyond any rational standard of compensation, i.e., based upon a percentage of the receipts representing the contribution to the picture. The basic reasons for the failure on the part of management in the adjustment of salary payments must therefore be sought for in some other quarters.

These reasons are to be found for the most part in trade practices which have developed in the production division of the industry. In the absence of accurate standards by which the value of the contribution made by the various contributors to a finished motion picture product may be gauged, foreign elements have entered into the methods of setting standards for compensation. Jealousy, ambition, and other destructive factors play their full part in the present system. All of these elements find their final expression in the competitive practices which have arisen in the industry in the development of artists and in a competitive bidding for their services.

Two specific expressions of these practices are found in: (1) the star system in motion picture production, exploited in such a manner that the values created by the producers are turned against them by the necessity for paying excessive salaries; and (2) unfair competitive bidding for talent.

The Star System (not confined to actors alone but embracing all employed in artistic, creative, directorial, specialized, technical, and supervisory capacities)

This system of selecting artists in the motion picture industry tends to create an artificial scarcity of talent. Its operation tends to force the supposed values of artists to fantastic figures by withholding from the market the potentially available services of executive ability and artistic talent of equal ability.

So in 1932 published statements of salaries paid or allegedly paid in the motion picture industry presumed to show a total of more than $16,000,000 paid annually to less than 230 employees in the eight major producing companies. Such statements do not include the salaries, payments, or bonuses received by approximately 500 officials, executives, directors, and others.

The inflated values which producers have placed upon a limited number of executives and artists, have created a vicious circle of bidding for their services. The creatures of the system have turned to plague their masters.

The position of the star has assumed such importance in the motion picture industry that producers have been induced to use every means at their disposal to entice away from other producers those individuals of proved box-office value who are performing under contract with another producer. Quite naturally, every producer has exerted similar ingenuity to retain the services of exceptional talent which he currently has under contract.

Another result of the system has been in some cases to "freeze" talent to the extent that valuable employees under contract to one company are permitted to remain idle for extended periods of time so that a rival company could not enjoy their services while they are not actually working under the then employer, and with the further result that their value to the industry generally, due to their inactivity, becomes greatly impaired.

On the other hand, and the converse of that situation whereby talent is "frozen", is the loaning by employers of stars under contracts to competing producers at extremely high prices to the competing producer, such prices being any number of times the regular salary which the star is entitled to receive from the then employing producer. Such loaning arrangement, as distinguished from loaning at a nominal amount above the star's salary for the period of the loan, in itself causes increased production costs: an increased production cost to the competing producer who borrows the talent; the engendering of a feeling in the mind of the star that he must thereafter necessarily be worth to his then employing producer the exorbitantly higher amount which his then employer has charged the competing producer; and as a result of such feeling in the mind of the star the then employing producer is met at once with demands for increased compensation which must either be yielded to or refused with concomitant dissatisfaction and disharmony between the then employing producer and such employee.

Offers to Stars Under Contract

The law of contracts, of course, furnishes protection to a producer against the offers which another producer might make to induce an employee to breach his contract. Thus, if a competing producer offers a larger salary to a star in order to induce him to break his existing contract, the former producer has legal recourse. However, if the offer to a star currently under contract is one which promises a larger salary at the expiration of the existing contract, the law of contracts offers no recourse to the injured producer for any injury which he may sustain.

The practice of competitive bidding for stars, which has led to a great deal of the mischief in the production division of the industry, is based upon the stuff of which stars are made. It appears that the services performed by stars and directors are of such character, and moreover, their temperament is of such character, that complete contentment is necessary to the proper performance of their work. Their value is apparently nil when they are "unhappy."

It is a common experience of producers that where offers of increased compensation are made to stars during their present employment, their services become practically worthless to their employers unless their salaries are increased to accord with the competing offer. The mere offer to a star of substantially increased compensation upon termination of his existing contract apparently produces a psychological effect in his work which tends to decrease or to actually destroy the value of his services to his present employer. Thus, in actual operation, a producer can by a mere offer compel his competitor to increase the compensation of the star beyond the value which the business judgment of that producer has placed upon the services of this employee.

As already pointed out, the natural scarcity of talent in any field of artistic endeavor imposes certain restrictions upon the freedom which producers or managers can exercise in the selection of talent. When this natural scarcity is further aggravated by the artificial scarcity of talent which has been created by the star system, the producer has very little protection against a star who refuses to perform adequately under his contract.

As a result, the competition of one producer against another for services of stars through the medium of offering increased compensation upon the termination of existing contracts, when such offer is made prior to the expiration date of contract, tends not only to force salary scales to excessive heights, but tends as well to depress the quality of film entertainment offered to the public.

Most of the major producers have made decided efforts to correct the abuses resulting from excessive production costs. Acting individually and without the aid of any centralized machinery, however, their efforts have been ineffective.

THE STATISTICAL SURVEY AND DEMONSTRABLE FACTS ASCERTAINED THEREFROM

With the cooperation of Donald K. Wallace, of the Division of Economic Research and Planning, National Recovery Administration, a statistical survey has been made with respect to the problems of payment of excessive compensation.

The work of Mr. Wallace is particularly noteworthy, since the tabulations contained in the appendix annexed hereto were formulated in such complete and minute detail that in each case they speak for themselves. His work has been deserving of especial commendation.

Scope of Investigation

Dual sets of the questionnaire which was used in connection with this investigation were mailed to approximately 2,000 individual establishments in the motion picture industry. Companies engaged in the production, distribution, and exhibition of motion pictures, or any combination of the three activities, were included.

Owing to the fact that only companies employing individuals whose aggregate compensation amounted to $150 or more per week each were required to report, a very substantial majority of the total companies were automatically released from the necessity of reporting.

Information was obtained from all of the major companies, as well as from so-called "small" and "medium-sized" organizations, which are quite generally classed as independents.

Representation

Information assembled and analyzed in this report covers the activities of 77 separate organizations, and it is felt that a representative cross-section of the three branches of the industry is revealed in the findings of the investigation, especially since only 9 companies represent the bulk of employment above the salary limitation of $150 or more a week which was established as a dividing line between the companies which were and were not required to supply the necessary information.

Information Included

In gathering the facts for this investigation, information was obtained from each company regarding gross receipts, total capital investment, surplus and surplus reserves, total assets, and net operating profit or loss.

In addition to the above, data were gathered from each organization regarding the total number of, and total compensation to, executives; supervisors; clerical, office, and service employees; actors and actresses (excluding extras); extra players; motion picture directors; musical directors and musicians; writers, authors, and dramatists (regularly employed and not regularly employed); composers, arrangers, and librarians; artists and sculptors; scenic artists and designers; costume designers; sound engineers; sound technicians; cameramen; studio mechanics; laboratory workers; "all other" employees; grand total; and regular pay roll employees.

Information was obtained also relative to total compensation, weekly wage-rates, cash salary received, and "all other" compensation received during 1933. Where compensation was reported under "all others", a further breakdown was obtained to determine whether it represented cash bonuses, commissions, and other compensation in addition to cash salary; bonuses, commissions, and other compensation in capital stock, bonds, or other securities; subscription rights for bonds, stock, or other securities included in special options; or any other compensation, remuneration, or gift, etc., not included elsewhere.

Arrangement of Material

The tabulated report annexed hereto is divided into separate sections as follows:

SECTION A. General statistics and average compensation.—This section includes basic recapitulations of operating conditions for the years 1931 to 1933, inclusive, as well as information regarding employment and average compensation during that period.

SECTION B. Producing-distributing companies.—Included in this section are data relative to the operations of so-called dual companies whose production and distribution activities are inseparable and operate as one. In certain instances separate information was available for each of the separate activities, which are combined as one, and, in such cases, it has been incorporated in the findings and designated by an asterisk (*) for production only, and by a dagger (†) for distribution only.

SECTION C. Producing companies.—These concerns only produce pictures, their distribution being handled by outside organizations.

SECTION D. Distributing companies.—These concerns engage in distribution only and act as intermediaries between so-called independent producers and exhibitors.

SECTION E. Motion picture exhibition.

SECTION F. Compensation of individuals employed in two or more departments of the same company.—Inasmuch as this report is set up on a departmental basis, individuals receiving compensation from two or more departments are reported twice and, in some cases, three times in the general departmental breakdowns. To eliminate this duplication, which was evident only in a few instances, their salaries have been combined in this section to arrive at their total compensation.

SECTION G. Analysis of all other compensation.—Individuals receiving other than cash compensation are reported in this section.

Individual Ranking

First the individuals were ranked by departments with producing-distributing companies in first position, producing companies in second position, distributing companies in third position, and exhibiting companies in fourth position.

The individual receiving the greatest amount of compensation in the producing-distributing companies was ranked as number one with the rank decreasing as each individual was recorded and tabulated. In other words, the first individual number in the report received the greatest amount of compensation during 1933, while the last-numbered individual received the smallest amount of compensation during the same period.

Individual-Company Relations

In addition to the compensation history of each individual who is listed separately in these findings, an operations history of the employing company is set up adjacent to it. This reveals at a glance the relationship of individual compensation to other factors in the employing company's operations. Such a set-up gives adequate coverage to individual-company relations and permits logical analyses and conclusions.

Relatives

An attempt was made, during this investigation, to obtain information from all related individuals in the motion picture industry. Inasmuch as the facts were gathered from the employing companies and not from the individuals themselves, such facts were, in a great many instances, not available, and, therefore, not consistent or comparable. Because of this, no attempt was made to tabulate the results where obtained, as an incomplete picture would not substantiate true conditions, nor serve as a basis for fair and equitable conclusions.

"All Other" Employees and Regular Pay Roll

The individuals designated as "all other" in section "A" of the report include all persons not designated under a separate occupation classification. In other words, a total of all individuals listed by occupation plus "all other" individuals indicates the total individuals employed by the reporting companies.

Individuals classified as "regular pay roll" employees are, as the classification indicates, the regular employees of the reporting companies. In other words, part-time employees such as extras, musicians, and other individuals not regularly employed are omitted from these totals.

Income Tax

It will be borne in mind that by the operation of the income-tax laws the net compensation will be less than the gross compensation as disclosed in the tabulated figures.

Weekly Wage Rate and Annual Compensation

It is quite generally believed that the weekly wage rate of employees in this industry is a barometer of their annual earnings. The findings of this investigation disprove this, however, and reveal that as a general thing the annual earnings are not 52 times greater than the weekly earnings. In other words, the weekly earnings and annual earnings are extremely disproportionate in many instances, with the weekly earnings holding the advantage as far as compensation is concerned.

For example: Individual designated as number 102, an actress, received $75,000 during 1933, while her weekly wage rate, $10,000, would indicate earnings of $520,000 for the same period.

A more glaring example of the fallacy of estimating annual earnings from weekly wage-rate figures is found in the following: Individual 98, an actor, received $25,000 a week during 1933, but his annual earnings totalled only $76,666.66. In other words, he was employed for approximately 3 weeks during the year, while a full year's employment at that rate would have amounted to $1,300,000. The lower salary brackets indicate the existence of similar conditions. For instance, individual No. 3044, an actor on a $1,200 a week salary basis, earned $400 during the year.

Salary Ratios in Producing-Distributing Companies

During 1933 compensation to all individuals represented 41.3 percent of the gross receipts of producing-distributing companies. Actors and actresses combined, not including extra players, ranked first, representing 8.6 percent of the gross receipts; clerical and office employees held second place, representing 8.4 percent; studio mechanics, third, representing 4.6 percent; while supervisors ranked fourth, with a representation of 4.4 percent of the gross receipts.

If executives, supervisors, and clerical and office employees are eliminated from the ratios, the remaining individuals, who might be classed as direct production employees, represent 26.7 percent of the gross receipts.

Total compensation represented 41.3 percent of the gross receipts of producing-distributing companies during 1933, 41.6 percent during 1932, and 37.7 percent during 1931.

Salary Ratios in Producing Companies

In producing companies, during 1933, total compensation to all individuals accounted for 52.8 percent of the reporting companies' gross receipts, with actors and actresses holding first place and representing 10.8 percent; executives in second position and accounting for 7.2 percent; studio mechanics ranking third and representing 4.4 percent; and artists and sculptors in fourth position, accounting for 4 percent of the gross receipts.

Reducing the ratios to those individuals who might be classed as direct production employees, by eliminating executives, supervisors, and clerical and office employees, the results show a representation of 40.1 percent for the remaining individuals in the aggregate.

Compensation to all individuals in producing companies represented 52.8 percent of the gross receipts during 1933, 46 percent during 1932, and 39.3 percent during 1931. In other words, the spread between gross receipts and total compensation narrowed considerably from 1931 to 1933.

Stating the converse of the foregoing proposition: Compensation to all individuals in producing companies increased 13.5 percent on the basis of gross receipts between 1931 and 1933, inclusive.

Salary Ratios in Distributing Companies

Total compensation to all individuals in distributing companies represented 25.3 percent of the gross receipts during 1933, 28.9 percent during 1932, and 24.7 percent during 1931. During 1933, executive salaries accounted for 5.8 percent of the gross receipts; salaries to supervisors for 6 percent; and clerical and office salaries, for 13.6 percent.

Salary Ratios in Exhibiting Companies

In exhibiting companies, during 1933, compensation to all individuals represented 25.6 percent of the gross receipts, with clerical and office salaries representing 6.6 percent; actors and actresses, 4.2 percent; musicians, 1.5 percent; and supervisors and executives, 2.3 percent.

Observations on the Investigation

The following observations on the investigation are particularly pertinent:

(1) The tendency of an increased ratio of compensation in producing and producing-distributing companies in proportion to decreased gross receipts.

(2) The general tendency in the industry in producing and producing-distributing companies for a greater share of salary costs out of gross receipts than is customary in other forms of enterprise, where the ratio of salary costs to receipts generally ranges around 25 percent.

(3) The apparent absence of any standard cost accounting formula in the fixation of production costs, where ordinarily industries of the size and importance of the motion picture industry do generally employ a standard formula.

ADEQUACY OF SUSPENDED CODE PROVISIONS TO CONTROL COMPETITIVE PRACTICES LEADING TO EXCESSIVE SALARIES

Excessive Salaries

Article V, division A, part 4, deals with unreasonably excessive salaries paid to executives and certain other classes of employees. It delegates to the Code Authority the power to investigate alleged cases of unreasonably excessive salaries and to assess the accused employer the amount of the unreasonably excessive payment, provided that such amount does not exceed $10,000. The exercise of this power of investigation and disciplinary action, however, is subject to the approval of the Administrator for Industrial Recovery. This agency is further permitted to make public the results of its findings. No action of the Code Authority under the provisions of this suspended section affects the validity of an existing contract. Even if payments under the contract are found by the Code Authority to be excessive, the contract remains binding upon both the employer and the employee.

Two very simple considerations recommend the indefinite suspension of this section of the code, namely:

(1) The power granted to the Code Authority under this provision is not contemplated under the terms of the National Industrial Recovery Act; and

(2) The provisions are administratively impracticable.

With reference to the first of these factors, it is significant to note that section 7 (c) of Title I of the National Industrial Recovery Act provides as follows:

"The President may differentiate according to the experience and skill of the employees affected and according to the locality of employment; but no attempt shall be made to introduce any classification according to the nature of the work involved which might tend to set a maximum as well as a minimum wage."

Even if the Recovery Act itself did not impose limitations upon fixing maximum compensation, the suspended provision dealing with excessive salaries would be undesirable because it is not capable of effective administration. It has already been pointed out that the management of individual concerns encounters difficulty in determining in advance the real commercial value of an artist to be used as the basis of determining salary arrangements. When the term "excessive" is further qualified by the term "unreasonably", any determination on the matter is of course placed upon a wholly speculative basis. The final determination by the Code Authority in any matter affecting excessive salaries would therefore have to be made on a wholly speculative basis.

Thus, the administration of the suspended provision is rendered ineffective by virtue of the very reason that the problem of excessive salaries has developed. Leaving aside the question of social implications, a star or executive is worth as much as the public can be led to think he is worth by paying to see his offerings. If individual producers find it difficult to gauge in advance the possible value of these services, it is patently impossible for a Code Authority to exercise any more effective judgment in the matter. It is of course possessed of no better material than the cumulative guesses of its membership.

Moreover, even if the term "unreasonably excessive" could be determined on some discreet or quantitative basis, the penalty provided for the discipline of offenders could not be expected to exercise any materially deterring influence. The Code Authority is limited in its assessment of fines for the payment of unreasonably excessive salaries to a penalty of $10,000. Since the amounts involved in excessive salaries run into large figures, this relatively small penalty could not be expected to prove effective.

If the public interest is being subserved through the payment of excessive salaries out of earnings of other divisions of the industry, or out of funds realized from the sale of securities, then the solution is obviously to be found in the establishment of machinery which will eliminate these practices, rather than in the attempt to arbitrarily limit the amount of salaries to be paid.

It is therefore recommended that the provision as now contained in the code dealing with the payment of excessive salaries be indefinitely suspended.

COMPETITIVE OFFERS OF EMPLOYMENT

The other sections of the code suspended by the President's Executive order (article V, division B, part 5, sections 1 (c), 2, 3, 4, and 6) seek to preserve the relationship existing between a producer and his employees by controlling the terms under which competing offers of employment may be made—

(a) Prior to the last 30 days of the period of the contract;

(b) Within the last 30 days of the period of the contract, and

(c) Within 3 to 6 months after the expiration date of the contract, dependent upon the salary range.

The first two of these provisions are designed to control the conditions under which offers of employment can be made prior to the termination of the contract.

Offers of Employment at Increased Compensation Prior to the Last 30 Days of the Contract

The first provision of this suspended section (article V, division B, part 5, section 1 (c)) provides that no producer shall negotiate with or make any offer to an employee under contract with another producer prior to the last 30 days of the period of the contract. It is designed to prevent secret raids upon the artists of one producer by another producer, and presumably to make it possible for the artist to devote his unqualified energies to the work of his employer during the period of the contract. It assumes that since he owes complete loyalty to his employer, he should not be subjected to any disturbing influences which might affect his ability to perform effectively under the terms of the contract. It further assumes that the application of the provisions would work no hardship on a competing producer, inasmuch as he does not intend to secure the services of the artist prior to the expiration date of the contract, and therefore is under no necessity to negotiate for his services more than 30 days prior to the expiration date of the contract.

All of the employees affected, however, maintain that any restriction on their right to negotiate at any time during the period of their then outstanding contract for their services following the expiration of such contract would constitute an interference not only with their legal rights, but also with the right to assure themselves presently for the future. To illustrate: The California statutes permit contractual relationships for employment for a 7-year period. Usually the contract of employment is so drawn by the producer that while he, through the exercise of options at stated intervals of time, may continue the services of the affected employee for the full 7-year period, nevertheless upon his failure to exercise such option he will be free of any contractual obligation and the employee will be without employment. The employee, therefore, whose services might be in great demand by reason of some outstanding success, or other circumstances, insists upon his privilege to contract at any time for the rendition of his services following any expiration date of his contractual relationships then existing with his present employer. The balance of interests is so nicely adjusted that the consideration of the public interests involved would appear to be the determining factor.

In my opinion the public interest should not permit such form of restraint as proposed, and it is therefore recommended that article V, division B, part 5, section 1 (c) of the code be indefinitely suspended.

Offers of Employment During the Last 30 Days of a Contract

The second provision of this suspended section (article V, division B, part 5, section 2) provides that no producer shall negotiate with or make any offer to an employee who receives at least $250 per week or $2,500 per picture, and who is under contract to another producer, during the final 30 days of the period of the contract. The provisions of this section do not apply to "free-lance" players unless their employment is intended to cover a period of at least 1 year. Thus there is immediately excluded from the provisions of this section of the code not only the "free-lance" player but other employees who earn less than $250 per week or $2,500 per picture. The so-called "little" artist is not affected.

Under this part of the suspended section the producer has the right to list with a registrar the names of his artists who fall within the specified classifications of the code. If a competing producer wishes to make an offer to any of the listed employees, he is required to give notice to the present employer and to deliver a copy of his offer to the registrar. The employing producer in turn must be given a reasonable opportunity to negotiate for the continuation of the services of the affected employee.

This latter provision is designed to guarantee that the bidding for services shall take place in the open and that the employing producer shall have an opportunity to meet any offers made by a competing producer, thus being able to retain the services of the affected employee under an open competitive situation.

Employee.—Two factors apparently are designed to guard the interests of the employee: (1) He has the full right under its operation to decide which offer he will accept. He is not compelled to remain with his present employer nor is he compelled to accept the offer of the competing producer, even if it is a higher offer. He is therefore given full opportunity in open competitive market to command the highest offer made for his services under terms which are attractive and agreeable to him. (2) The employee is protected against the possibility of loss of both offers. The code compels the competing producer to make his offer firm and hold it open in order that the artist may take advantage of it if he so desires. The employees affected object to the provisions in their entirety, however, claiming that in practical operation the results are directly opposite to those which apparently would be achieved.

Competing producer.—Opportunity is given to a competing producer to bid on any basis he sees fit for the services of the desired artist. There is no limitation upon the generosity of his offer either in terms of compensation or period of employment. His offer would naturally tend to be higher than that of the then employing producer.

Employing producer.—No substantial restrictions are placed by the provisions of this section on the freedom of the employing producer to negotiate with an employee under contract and to offer as attractive terms of employment as he desires.

It should be noted, however, that under the terms of this provision the employing producer is allowed a maximum of only 3 days in which to negotiate for the continued services of the artist, and that this maximum term may be further reduced in the discretion of the registrar. Such a provision places a somewhat arbitrary power in the hands of the registrar—one which conceivably might be used to restrict the employing producer in effectively negotiating with the artist who has received a competing offer.

One other restriction is placed upon the freedom allowed the employing producer in meeting the offer of a competing producer for the services of employees under written contract for a period, inclusive of options, if any, of less than 1 year, who receive $250 per week or $2,500 per picture, and employees under written contract for 1 year, or at least 3 pictures, inclusive of options, if any, who receive $250 per week or $2,500 per picture (section 2 (b) and (c)). With respect to such employees a competing producer need give notice of an offer only in cases where an artist is under written contract and where the employing producer has made an offer to renew or extend this contract prior to the last 30 days of its term.

However, the same considerations as previously enunciated with respect to the employees' contentions, and those which the public interest has weighed, would apply.

It is therefore recommended that article V, division B, part 5, sections 2 and 3, be indefinitely suspended.

Offers of Employment Subsequent to Expiration Date of Contract

The remaining sections, article V, division B, part 5, sections 4 and 6, are designed to preserve in some degree even after the expiration date of a contract the so-called "goodwill" value which a producer has built up in an artist. This section provides that if the last employing producer has made a bona fide firm offer for the services of an employee who has received from $500 to $1,000 per week, or from $5,000 to $10,000 per picture, the last employing producer shall have notice of offers made by competing producers within a 3-month period subsequent to the expiration of the employment. In cases where the compensation of such employee was more than $1,000 per week or more than $10,000 per picture, the last employing producer shall be entitled to receive notice of offers made by competing producers within 6 months subsequent to the expiration of the contractual relationship previously existing.

Further provision is made with respect to the determination by the Code Authority of the good faith of offers so as to entitle producers to notice of subsequent offers, and procedure is also devised whereby, after notice has been given to the last employing producer, he shall be allowed a reasonable time, not to exceed 3 days, within which to conduct negotiations designed to meet the offer of the competing producer. Machinery is also provided designed to furnish safeguards for the exercise by the former employee of his free choice for accepting or rejecting any offers made.

The theory of prior repute forms the basis for the provisions of this section dealing with the control of competitive bidding for the services of artists prior to the expiration date of their contracts. This theory, supported by producers, contends that employees engaged in artistic and creative work have been enabled to a substantial degree to secure large compensations by reason of the efforts and the facilities furnished by their producer-employers. Moreover, it contends that by reason of such circumstances the producer-employer possesses an ethical and moral right to be made acquainted with offers made by competing producers for the services of former employees within a stipulated period of time after the expiration of the contractual relationship.

This provision is of course designed to enable the last employing producer to meet such offers, or at least to negotiate with his former employee for a continuance of the employment, thereby preserving whatever asset the producer may believe has been developed in the artist as the result of the former employment.

The provisions of this entire section are based upon the assumption that while an artist may be born, in effect he has to be made by the efforts of the producer before his talents have any unusual commercial value. Careful training, proper casting in proper parts, and skillful and expensive advertising are all considered important contributing factors in developing a star to a point where his services command substantial compensation. In short, the producer maintains that he compensates an artist for his services in two ways: First, through the actual payment of salaries; and second, through the professional standing which the artist secures as the result of intelligent direction and proper casting. It is on the contention that this latter type of compensation in many ways is of more real value to the artist than the former, that the producer maintains he is entitled to some machinery which will tend to protect his goodwill value in the artist.

On the other hand, the employees affected by this provision oppose its application upon the ground that such provision will tend to decrease bidding for their services and thereby tend to limit the compensation which their services may command in the future; further, that such provisions impair their right of negotiation while completely free from any contractual obligations whatsoever.

In analyzing the intent and purposes of this particular provision, it would appear that the factors involved are no different from those surrounding any other type of contractual relations governing any other type of speculative business procedure. Granting that a producer makes substantial investment in the development of the star during the period of the contract, there seems to be no valid reason why he should expect to retain any option in any values which might be created as a result of this investment beyond the period of the contract. The entire matter sifts down to one of business judgment. As in any other type of speculative investment, the producer will naturally adjust the term of the contract to the best of his business judgment, with a view to securing an adequate return on his capital investment within the life of the contract.

If, for some fortuitous reason, values are created during the period of the contract which exceed his original expectations, there seems to be no valid reason why he should expect to retain an option in perpetuity on these values if there is no contract basis for such continuation. The fact that this option is in effect granted only for a period of 3 months or 6 months is merely a limited time application of a faulty principle.

The entire system of notice of offers and further opportunity to negotiate would in fact tend to increase unreasonable inducements rather than to decrease the same.

It is therefore recommended that the provisions of article V, division B, part 5, sections 4 and 6 of the code be indefinitely suspended.

SUGGESTIONS

It would not be fair to this industry, in my opinion, if, as a result of the investigation as made, some suggestions were not offered. The following is therefore respectfully submitted for consideration:

THE FORMULATION OF A COMMITTEE EITHER WITH OR WITHOUT GOVERNMENT PARTICIPATION TO INVESTIGATE, STUDY, AND REPORT ON—

A. A method for compensating those engaged in artistic, creative, interpretative, directorial, technical, and supervisory capacities on the basis of a minimum guaranteed compensation against a percentage of the receipts of the respective pictures upon which they may be engaged; and

B. Recommendations for—

- (1) A uniform production cost formula.
- (2) A uniform production report system.
- (3) A uniform budget schedule.
- (4) Uniform salary ranges for classifications of artistic, creative, interpretative, directorial, technical, and supervisory employments; and

C. Whether it would be desirable, practical, proper, and legal to establish a permanent industry commission, with or without Government participation, but in any event composed of a representative of producers, and a representative, depending upon the interest affected at any time, of any of the following classes of employees, and restricted solely to such classes, to wit: actors, writers, directors, technicians, or supervisors, which might possess with the consent and approval of the industry, among other things, the power—

- (1) To require all proposed offers of employment to be transmitted to the commission for its approval prior to the same being actually made.
- (2) To require all proposed negotiations for employment to be with full disclosure to the commission.
- (3) To provide for regulation of salaries in proper cases.
- (4) To direct that the services of employees not utilized by the then employing producer may be available upon such equitable terms and conditions as the commission may prescribe, and in a proper case, to other producers.

- (5) To make findings and report to the producing company concerned when in the opinion of the commission corporate assets have been wasted by production executives in their employment of any members of the foregoing classes of employees above mentioned.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

GENERAL INSTRUCTIONS

Each schedule in the attached questionnaire is set up to cover the three divisions of the motion-picture industry, or in other words, to cover separately production, distribution, and exhibition.

Where an individual or a company was engaged in all three of the activities, sections "A", "B", and "C" of the schedules should be filled out completely. In other words, if the individual designated as "Number 10" received a salary or salary and other compensation from each of the three activities, the amounts of such earnings should be specified in the sections dealing with each activity.

On the other hand, if an individual received a salary or salary and other compensation from only one activity, or, for example, from motion-picture exhibition, only section "C"—"Motion-Picture Exhibition" should be completed.

If none of the individuals received an aggregate compensation of $150 or more a week, so indicate and return questionnaire to this office.

Certification of the correctness of this return must be made below by an appropriate executive officer in behalf of the company.
